Engagement and Discussion of RSSAC058

Brad Verd introduced Robert Carolina. Robert Carolina reviewed the functional clear statement criteria. Ashwin Rangan asked about the scope of decision-making as it relates to root server system (RSS) governance. Robert Carolina suggested that RSSAC037 outlines a primary list of types of decisions, and the GWG could identify other types of decisions in its discussions. Peter Koch asked if the GWG is expected to identify an exhaustive list of issues and questions. Robert Carolina encouraged the GWG to consider the types of decisions.

Robert Carolina noted that the functional clear statement criteria require identifying the stakeholders that need to approve a decision and the necessary level of approval. This includes decisions that apply only to the root server operators (RSOs). Robert Carolina noted that any governance proposal needs to map its decisions to the functional clear statement criteria. Fred Baker urged a distinction between RSO operational decisions and RSS process decisions. Robert Carolina noted that some criteria consider RSO independence and other criteria consider collective RSO action. There are also important questions about the future of RSSAC as it relates to RSS governance.

Finally, the functional clear statement criteria also require a description of how the RSOs will be incorporated into the ICANN Empowered Community. Fred Baker asked if the RSOs will incorporate as individuals or as a collective. Samantha Eisner noted that the members of the ICANN Empowered Community decide how they participate. One of the purposes of the ICANN Empowered Community is to establish a method for collective action. Incorporating the RSOs into the ICANN Empowered Community will require significant work, including amending the ICANN Bylaws. Samantha Eisner noted that the outcomes of the GWG that require amending the ICANN Bylaws will not just be about the ICANN Empowered Community. Ultimately, these changes will require the consent of the ICANN Empowered Community, too.

Peter Koch asked if “RSOs” and “RSO community” are synonymous. Robert Carolina noted that the text is intended to be flexible. There is ambiguity in the success criteria. Suzanne Woolf asked about stakeholder input as part of GWG work. Samantha Eisner noted that the GWG will have to consider all input from the Public Comment process. Robert Carolina agreed and noted that the functional clear statement criteria do not intend to limit the definition of stakeholders.
