Dear EURALO members,

in this Newsletter edition you will find the most interesting moments of March and part of April `24, announcements and reports of events, and most importantly - a lot of news from our members!

We will start with a short illumination of ICANN79, an extremely interesting and eventful hybrid meeting. Sessions and meetings organized by the At-Large community and marked as the most useful can be found here ICANN79 At-Large wiki space.

We would thank our At-Large leaders for the At-Large Session Reports from ICANN79.

A look back at ICANN79 is here:

The best way to find out the news of EURALO, exchange updates and opinions, and understand what kind of roadmap we are adopting for moving forward is to participate in open monthly meetings of Euralo. The last one took place on April 9, 2024.

We would share an Euralo interview with Avri Doria about ICANN (and our ideality-) IGF, plans for the future, the ICANN Board experience, books for reading/listening now, Multistakeholder Model, hobbies, the ICANN topic as a focus of attention...

In EURALO this spring, which is crucial for discussions about Internet Governance, we pay special attention to Internet Governance issues. If you missed the IG round tables, organised by EURALO, you can find the records (all sessions moderated by Pari Esfandiari):

Joanna Kulesza is reporting back from a successful completion of the 'Cybersecurity and International Law' residential course held in Brussels from 12-14 February 2024!

“Over 20 participants from EU Member States and third states convened to exchange views and share best practices on International Law and cybersecurity. This event, co-organized with the European Security and Defence College (ESDC), offered a unique chance to discuss pressing topics covered by Pillar 3 of the EU’s Cybersecurity Strategy and the European Union Agency for Cybersecurity (ENISA) #ENISA European Cybersecurity Skills Framework #ECSF profile.

Dr. Joanna Kulesza, from #WPiA #UniLodz, and Mr. Giuseppe Zuffanti, Coordinator for Cyber Issues at #ESDC, kicked off the course, providing insights into the EU Cyber Ecosystem and facilitating engaging discussions.

Key themes explored included responsible state behavior in cyberspace, due diligence, and norms for secure digital environment. Participants tackled practical applications of international law in cyberspace, addressing geopolitical challenges and fostering joint EU positions.

Special thanks to our esteemed speakers from the European Commission, European Defence Agency, #ENISA, EU Institute for Security Studies, EDPS - European Data Protection Supervisor, ICANN, andGlobal Forum on Cyber Expertise (GFCE) for their invaluable contributions.

This course is part of the broader ESDC Cyber ETEE platform, aimed at enhancing cybersecurity training for civilian and military personnel across EU Member States.”
I have attended the UA Days in Belgrade. I am taking the opportunity of a delay in my flight back to drop some notes.

The meeting was very interesting. We had a full house in the morning, with numbers decreasing in the afternoon. I don’t know about the online participation. Please find the programme here: https://uaday.rs/program/?lang=en

The first panel was about multilingualism, Sally Costerton was among the speakers. It seems that the concept that the ultimate goal is multilingualism in the Internet is taking speed. To be noted that Anil Kumar Jain, UASG Chair, mentioned the four “pillars” among which there is no mention of the role of the user community. Interesting contribution by Leonid Todorov, arguing that we will have a stronger push to UA readiness from places and people that are more disadvantaged rather than from places and people that are better aware - in an intellectual way - about the need for equality of opportunities in internet access.

The second panel featured some registries that have been active in achieving results in term of UA readiness. I was the last speaker, and brought the point of view of the users, who are the most affected by lack of UA, making also a couple of examples. The good news is that my contribution was well received, the bad news is that I made the point that the user community should play a role - I argued that it should be the “fifth pillar” in the UA strategy - as users can put pressure on the providers that are not UA ready, proposing that we have a paradigm shift from “providers will graciously become UA compliant as a bonus for the users” to “users worldwide have the right to demand that all users have the same Internet experience regardless their language or script they use”. The bad news is in the fact that I have proposed that the user community - and At-Large at the forefront - use their footprint in the wider community to build awareness of the user rights and produce pressure - also in collaboration with governments - to providers to be UA compliant. That means a call for action for At-Large.

In summary, we need to move from being spectators, waiting for things to happen, for the technical community to provide solutions, for providers to deploy UA-compliant services, to an active part of the community to demand and obtain the same level of service for all Internet users, regardless language, script, physical location, or other factors.

Digitally Aware Elections event series

This week, the Brussels School of Governance successfully launched the ‘Digitally Aware Elections’ series at the Brussels School of Governance in collaboration with the Internet Society, focusing on the pivotal digital policy issues for the 2024-2029 EU parliamentary term. A special thanks to our first four speakers, Fausto Matos (European People’s Party), Thierry Masson (Renew Europe) and their discussants Romain Bosc (RIPE NCC) and Polina Malaja (CENTR), for their insights into the topics that have dominated, and will continue to dominate, the European Parliament’s agenda for all things digital. David Frautschy and Frédéric Taes contributed to the debates and added the perspective of the Internet Society.

During our discussions we addressed some of the major issues that will become important in the next five years, and caught some glimpses into how the digital advisors saw them playing out. Some of the key highlights included discussions on the need for technical awareness on the part of legislators and their advisors, the increased geopolitical nature of the discussions around digital policy, and the role of (European) values in shaping the core infrastructure of the internet. It has been really enlightening to hear the different underlying principles from the different political groups, and how these then shape attitudes towards policymaking in the digital space, and we look forward to hearing more from the advisors to different groups!

Join us for our next sessions on 14 May with Arnika Zinke from The Greens/EFA, and on 21 May with Inês de Matos Pinto from the S&D group. Don’t miss out on our final event at the Internet Society in Brussels, where we will present a comprehensive policy brief. Let’s continue to shape the future of digital policies in the EU together!

Greetings from the European ICANN79 Fellows!

Natália Terčová from Czechia and Emilia Zalewska-Czajczyńska from Poland were among the attendees at ICANN79 as Fellows. Both are active in the internet governance realm and anticipate further engagement with EURALO! Get to know more about their involvement and backgrounds below.

Natália Terčová is a research specialist and a Ph.D. candidate in Media Studies at the Faculty of Social Studies, Masaryk University. Her main research focus is on the digital skills of children and adolescents. Furthermore, she is interested in online privacy, sharenting, AI, and counseling related to adolescents’ risk-taking and addictive behavior.

She is the founder of the Internet Governance Forum (IGF) Czechia, a former NextGen@ICANN at ICANN78, and an ICANN79 Fellow. Additionally, she is a member of the EURALO Individuals’ Association at ICANN, Vice Facilitator on the Board of the Internet Society, Youth Standing Group (ISOC YSG), and 2024 Early Career Fellow at Internet Society.

Natália holds a bachelor's degree in Public Policy and Media Studies, as well as two master’s degrees—one in Media Studies and another in Counseling for Psychology and Social Work. Alongside her ongoing Ph.D. studies, she is lecturing and mentoring students at university.

Emilia Zalewska-Czajczyńska is a lawyer specialising in regulations and policy related to new technologies and Internet governance. She works as a Senior Specialist for Strategic Cybersecurity Analysis at the Polish National Research Institute NASK. As part of her role, she handles projects related to national and European legislation, digital governance, international cooperation, and provides advisory to entities within the national cybersecurity system.

Her other field of interest lies at the intersection of human rights with emerging technologies, especially AI and the metaverse. Emilia is also actively involved in supporting the development of digital competences among young people – she is a co-founder and coordinator of Youth IGF Poland. In 2022, she served as the Eastern Europe Representative on the Youth Coalition on Internet Governance steering committee. Recently, she has completed a training programme as an ICANN79 Fellow.

Emilia holds degrees from the University of Warsaw in two faculties: Law and Applied Animal Psychology. Currently, she is pursuing postgraduate studies in project management at Leon Kozminski Academy.

You have the opportunity to connect with both of them virtually on April 25 at the She Leads STEM webinar, co-organized by IGF Czechia under Natália’s leadership, in celebration of the international Girls in ICT Day. Emilia will serve as one of the speakers on a panel highlighting inspiring stories of women in technology.

You are warmly invited to join us!
