

Harold Feld is the Senior Vice President for Public Knowledge, one of the nation's premier consumer advocacy organizations working at the intersection of copyright, telecommunications and the Internet. Feld is a highly regarded thought leader in the areas of telecommunications and digital consumer protection. Feld has served on the FEMA National Advisory Committee Integrated Public Alert and Warning System Subcommittee (NAC-IPAWS), and the Commerce Spectrum Advisory Committee (CSMAC) – and currently serves on the Communications Security, Reliability and Interoperability Council (CSRIC). He was previously Senior Vice President at the Media Access Project (MAP), a public interest law firm, where he advanced competition policies in media, telecommunications and technology. Prior to joining MAP, Feld was an associate at Covington & Burling, and clerked for the DC Court of Appeals.
