

Beau Brendler is chairman of the North American At-Large Regional Organization (NARALO), a position he has been elected to twice. Prior to that he served two terms on the At-Large Advisory Board. A longtime consumer advocate and investigative journalist, he has been instrumental in raising awareness of Internet user concerns in the ICANN community, seeking better corporate behavior and exposing fraud. Brendler has been a network television news executive, newspaper and magazine editor (and winner of a National Magazine Award). He helps non-profits launch websites and create communication strategies, is a sought-after writer and columnist on a range of topics, and works for economic justice in the developing world. A native of Portland, Oregon, he lives in New York.