ALAC Statement on the ICANN Consolidated Meetings Strategy Proposal

The At-Large Advisory Committee understands the difficulties that the meeting staff encounters to find the right venue for the ICANN International meetings in some regions, especially because these meetings have been growing in size and scope. It welcomes the effort to review the current selection system.

As ICANN is a global organization and it is making huge efforts to become more international, the main objective to be considered in the review should be the inclusiveness: except for particular security cases, the ICANN meetings should be fully accessible to the whole Internet community from all countries of the world. Any new strategy that does not fulfill this requirement couldn't be considered as an improvement of the system.

Therefore, the ALAC believes that easy VISA procurement to citizens of all countries should be the first criterion of the new strategy. The experience of refused Visas for Toronto was very painful for the ICANN community, especially those from the south. The Internet Governance Forum (IGF) appears to have found ways to engage with host country candidates to accept special Visa arrangements for the IGF participants. As a global organization and through its relationship with governments, ICANN can do this as well.

The second very important element for the review is the quality of logistics in general, which includes the venue quality, accessibility, and closeness to various standing hotels and other facilities, as well as the safety and security of the venue.

Finally, the cost is to be considered for ICANN and its community: airfare, accommodation cost, and all other expenses should be reasonable. Multi-year contract with meeting facilities, such as hotel chains and other service providers may indeed reduce the overall cost.

The ALAC thinks that the new strategy should strive to keep the concept of holding meetings in the 5 regions as equally as possible, which demonstrate the ICANN commitment to diversity and its serious willing to attain the global outreach. Nevertheless, it does not consider harmful an unbalanced approach when it is justified on a case-by-case basis when the above criteria cannot be satisfied.

The At-Large Advisory Committee therefore strongly believes that the review should be based on the 3 mentioned criteria to result in a consolidated strategy that is in line with the new management objectives of internationalization and inclusiveness.
