00:36:26   John McCormac – HosterStats.com: Nominet (the .UK) registry had a problem like this with the introduction of the .uk and it gave priority to .co.uk and .org.uk registrants and then after a period opened the domain name to open registration.

authoritative dictionary sent to Justine in email
01:09:28   Gopal Tadepalli: @Alan Greenberg @ALAC – Justine ChewMany thanks. Of late, one types a word into an online translator and it gives the meaning. This is also multi-lingual. There are some reports on the efficacy of these online "meaning" generators.

I suggest that, after the reporter suggests a dictionary, the folks who want to register be given the option top make an alternative suggestion.

Good...perhaps you can share a few highlights with me offline.
01:27:06   John McCormac - HosterStats.com: The last thing that the Web needs is more discounting new gTLDs full of one year registrations. Some ROs that have found that their business model did not work changed to this discounting registrations model. Many ASP qualifiers will be strating well behind the curve and will be competing with the local ccTLDs and with the .COM. Sockpuppetry is also a very dangerous prospect.
01:34:35   Gopal Tadepalli: Replying to "Good to note, @Gopal..."

Certainly after the "research mode" is over on this.
01:36:53   Olivier MJ Crepin-Leblond: In my opinion, with the Latin script, it is near impossible to have a single rule in relation to accented characters as each language has different rules. The rules are not with the script, they are with the languages
01:36:55   Alan Greenberg: Not particularly relevant to this discussion, but to correct the first slide, Quebec is the largest Canadian Province by physical size, but the 2nd largest by population.
