Preliminary Proposal for At-Large Summit II (ATLAS II)

Olivier Crépin-Leblond, Chair of the ALAC

25 March 2013

Purpose

The purpose of holding the ATLAS II is fourfold:

- 1) Strengthen the bottom up structure of the At-Large community by building capacity and awareness of At-Large policies and process of the 150+ At-Large Structures (ALSes);
- 2) Further develop the At-Large Community's capacity for engagement in ICANN by increasing its knowledge and understanding of the key issues confronting ICANN and ICANN's roles and responsibilities;
- 3) Plan for the next stage of the ALAC/At-Large community's development;
- 4) Allow ICANN to showcase a key component of its bottom-up multi-stakeholder environment to the rest of the world at a time pivotal to ICANN and to the Internet multi-stakeholder model.

Location

The proposed location and timing for the ATLAS II would be the June 2014 ICANN Meeting scheduled for 22-26 June 2014 in London.

The London location is seen as allowing maximum impact to showcase the global diversity of the At-Large community which is a key component within the ICANN multi-stakeholder model. London would also allow key ICANN staff and the current ALAC Chair to use their networks to promote the ATLAS II and reap maximum benefits for ICANN's image with a return on investment catalyzed by optimized exposure.

In terms of planning, holding the ATLAS II in London in June 2014 (FY14) as opposed to October 2014 (FY15), would allow for the announcement of the Summit to be made nearly one year in advance. This would allow for the time necessary to plan this event.

With the UK being part of the Commonwealth, ALS representatives from these countries will be given preferential treatment in the acquisition of their visas.

As an international hub, London has more non-stop international flights than any US-based cities. This would translate into requiring less transit visas for the ALS representatives.

Venue

A key request is that the ATLAS II be held within the venue of the ICANN hotel. This would facilitate the feeling of belonging to the ICANN community. The first ATLAS in March 2009 was held at a hotel two blocks away from the ICANN venue which resulted in widespread feeling among the At-Large community that they were not fully part of ICANN.

In addition, the ATLAS II meetings are likely to include meetings in which other members of the ICANN community will be invited to participate. Having the ATLAS II be in the same venue will allow for much greater participation by all members of the ICANN community in At-Large Summit activities.

Schedule

The proposed schedule of the ATLAS II would be to have plenaries for all ALS representatives on Saturday, 21 June 2014 and Sunday, 22 June 2014 with a final ATLAS II meeting on the morning of Thursday, 26 June 2014. The RALOs and At-Large Working Groups would hold meetings Monday through Wednesday. As part of the regular ALAC schedule, the ALAC would hold a planning meeting the morning of Friday, 27 June 2014 with the ExCom meeting on the afternoon of Friday, 27 June 2014.

Financing

Historical Financing Perspective

During FY13, ICANN supported three At-Large RALO General Assemblies totaling $125,000. Without the holding of the ATLAS 2 in FY14, the At-Large community would have requested RALO General Assemblies for four of their RALOs during FY14 at an average of $50,000 each (4 x $50,000 = $200,000). Based on this, the overall budget of the ATLAS 2, which includes five General Assemblies, could be seen as incorporating the costs of four General Assemblies in a manner which incorporates economies of scale.

This paper seeks to address the questions that are now being raised about whether the present ecosystem of Internet governance, including ICANN, is able to adapt to recent changes in the ecosystem that have taken place. More specifically, within the following four areas:

1. The Global Public interest;
2. The Multi-Stakeholder System – A Choice for the Future;
3. Global Governance; and
4. Institutional and Practical Cooperation.

The ALAC ratified the At-Large White Paper on Future Challenges entitled Making ICANN Relevant, Responsive and Respected (R3) on 29 September 2012. The result can be independently verified under:

Introduction

The Internet Corporation for Assigned Names and Numbers (ICANN) is well into its second decade. Overall, informed Internet users and professionals consider that ICANN has performed its role as a technical coordinator of the Internet’s unique identifiers rather well, ensuring the reliability and enhancing the security of the Domain Name System (DNS). This stewardship occurred over a period during which the number of Internet users grew by several orders of magnitude to more than two billion today, and when practically all areas of human activity have come to rely on the Internet, arguably the first truly global infrastructure in history. Amazing though the quantitative growth has been, the qualitative change of the Internet has proven to be even more fundamental, from a narrow, optional extra communication channel into a must-have, broad platform of essential and critical services for a large part of humanity. The Internet now has to deal with governance and policy issues far more complex, and more intertwined with other spheres of life than in 1998 when ICANN was set up. Many of the difficulties ICANN is now faced with come from the magnitude and speed of change.

The Challenges Facing ICANN

Accordingly, questions are now being raised about whether the present ecosystem of Internet governance, including ICANN, is able to adapt to such momentous change. The challenges fall into four main areas:

1) The Global Public interest:

In a continuously evolving and challenging environment, will ICANN be able to keep pace with growing public interest requirements, and adapt its methods to better serve the global user community, while escaping capture by narrower interests?

In its Affirmation of Commitments (AoC), ICANN has undertaken to make decisions in the interest of a global community of Internet users. As the size and diversity of this community has grown considerably, its needs too have evolved. In its pioneering years, ICANN served a few million people for whom the Internet represented a novelty rather than a necessity. Today, the duty to serve a far wider community -- the billions of people for whom the Internet is an indispensable global facility -- takes on an entirely different meaning. The key question is whether ICANN will be able to better serve the public without being captured by narrower interests that have prevailed in the past and today hold a preeminent position.

One of the main factors limiting ICANN's ability to rise up to this challenge is its ambiguous understanding of "the public interest". By keeping its concept of "public interest" ambiguous, ICANN is perceived to pay lip service to it. There are examples where this ambiguity has led to unsatisfactory responses to actual problems, conflict resolution, and enforcement of contract provisions, and as a result iniquities within the multi-stakeholder process have become ingrained. Such shortcomings undermine the public's confidence in ICANN, which has shown clear signs of erosion. The increasing success of alternatives to the multi-Top Level Domain paradigm is one such indication of the growing crisis of confidence. This unfortunate ambiguity is compounded by the fact that ICANN lacks a clear engagement strategy to better serve the global public interest, and it lowers the level of respect and trust of Internet users towards the organization. Reversing this unfortunate trend can only be achieved if ICANN develops a clear concept to guide its policy development processes, a strategy for a more convincing engagement, and appropriate mechanisms to protect ICANN against capture by any of its constituent parts.

2) The Multi-Stakeholder System - A Choice for the Future:

Is ICANN's multistakeholder approach sufficiently robust and sustainable in the long run under increased external pressure?

Many sovereign states first dismissed the Internet and the Domain Name System (DNS) as a marginal, passing phenomenon. Having finally understood their critical importance, some states are now attempting to regain control through specific inter-governmental structures, with potentially damaging consequences to the innovation and development of the Internet, and possibly to its global accessibility and end-to-end functioning as we know it. ICANN's value proposition and strength in contrast to any inter-governmental approach, is its multi-stakeholder, bottom-up policy development model. While defending the benefits of this model, ICANN has neglected to improve it to meet demands, which have grown more differentiated with the expansion of the Internet and the types of its users. In a decade, ICANN has grown from a small group of closely-connected pioneers to an entity with global responsibilities and worldwide operations. ICANN's continuous cycles of internal organizational reviews have failed to identify the substantive changes demanded by this shifting environment. The proliferation of constituencies and stakeholder groups in the ICANN structure needs to be accompanied by real efforts to achieve and maintain equality and balance among various stakeholder interests. Protections must exist to ensure that consensus procedures can no longer be opaquely circumvented for political expediency. By-laws governing the status and role of stakeholders need to be revised so as to fully engender the informed consent of all ICANN's components, including sovereign states represented through its Governmental Advisory Committee (GAC).

3) Global Governance:

Are the arrangements related to the governance of the Internet's critical resources, including that of ICANN's own internal governance, adequate to meet the needs of a growing and diverse community of internet users worldwide?

The governance arrangements for the Internet's critical resources are a point of continuous global interest and concern. Correspondingly, the internal governance arrangements of the organizations responsible for the management of the Internet's critical resources, such as ICANN, have been and will continue to be subject to intense global scrutiny and concern as well. Given the rapid growth of internet users worldwide and the increasing diversification of user needs, ICANN needs to grapple with the crucial question of how to evolve its governance arrangements to meet the legitimate expectations of the worldwide Internet community, who are ever more a producer and consumer of content, in an ever more diversified cultural and linguistic context, while preserving the multistakeholder approach and avoiding the pitfalls of inter-governmental solutions. The weaknesses in ICANN's internal governance arrangements are of great concern to the international community. These weaknesses have even been acknowledged by the NTIA itself based on the additional requirements recently added to the IANA functions, which touch on the structural separation of policymaking from implementation, robust organization-wide conflict of interest policy, heightened respect for local country laws and consultation and reporting requirements to increase transparency and accountability to the international community. ICANN's ability to fulfill the new requirements is questionable, particularly when internal dynamics within ICANN have restrained it from effectively reforming itself despite the creation of publicly visible reform efforts such as the Accountability and Transparency Review Team (ATRT). Slow progress in addressing ICANN's internal governance weaknesses combined with the failure to speed up the internationalization of ICANN towards a shared global responsibility in governing the Internet's critical resources, will continue to fuel vociferous contention over the legitimacy of ICANN and promote alternatives such as the inter-governmental solutions.

4) Institutional and Practical Cooperation:

Can ICANN coordinate and cooperate effectively with organizations that have been set up to deal with Internet governance issues beyond ICANN's remit of technical coordination?

The governance of the Internet deals with complex issues of public policy with multiple overlapping jurisdictions and actors (both state and non-state). ICANN's mandate pertains to technical coordination, but its technical, operational, and management decisions regarding the Domain Name System (DNS) have significant impact on other non-technical policy issues that fall under the rubric of Internet Governance. These non-technical issues include intellectual property, privacy, e-commerce, security and even human rights and cultural (including language) diversity. Given the interconnectedness between ICANN's technical policies and the non-technical policies under the jurisdiction of other organizations, for the sake of the global public interest, ICANN has an obligation to reach out to the organizations and establish effective working relations. ICANN has yet to demonstrate the ability to proactively, adequately and appropriately reach out, coordinate and cooperate with organizations outside of its technical coordination remit. Strained relations with international entities, partly due to the ambitions and power politics of some national authorities or intergovernmental organizations, have sometimes been aggravated by a poorly calibrated message from ICANN. Some of the friction may also have been caused by the lack of ICANN's adequate and appropriate response to emerging challenges and by its failure to draw from the strengths of its own multi-stakeholder nature.

Recommendations:

The above are some of the concerns that are being expressed, with increasing vigor, from many sources including those who would seek to undermine or even eliminate ICANN. In response, the following recommendations are made to initiate the kind of in-depth change required for ICANN to adapt to these and other future challenges:

The Global Public Interest

- Develop a clear concept of public interest to guide ICANN's policy development processes
- Publish ICANN's appraisal of challenges in the international and institutional fields, and its program for the coming year in this respect, as a mandatory component of its Strategic Plan.
- Give all due consideration to Conflicts of Interest, and correct any situation where such a conflict, real or perceived, is detrimental to mutual trust and harmful to the public interest. Accepting mere statements of interest while allowing vested interests to influence policy affecting them is inefficient, and harmful to ICANN's credibility.
- Provide for relevant whistle-blowing (e.g. regarding conflicts of interest), with proper rules protecting both the corporation and prospective whistle-blowers.

The Multi-Stakeholder System

- Transform the roles of the Governmental Advisory Committee (GAC) and At-Large Advisory Committee (ALAC) from purely advisory to involvement in policy formation. This measure shall not be implemented separately from, nor before, a coordinated reform of structures affecting all Supporting Organizations (SOs) and Advisory Committees (ACs).
- Reorganize the roles and relationships of Supporting Organizations (SOs) and Advisory Committees (ACs), with explicit aim to improve balance and avoid silos.
- Address the Country-Code Top-Level Domain (ccTLD) diversity of practices vis-à-vis ICANN's general standards and best practices.
- Provide permanent and qualified staff support for each stakeholder group.

Internal Governance Arrangements

- Make the Board the executive committee of the ICANN community.
- Redirect the fiduciary duty of Directors to the community, not to ICANN itself.
- Improve the articulation between the Board and the CEO: the Board to provide direction and oversight, the CEO to propose, implement, control and report.

- Remove the CEO from the list of voting Board members to the position of being permanently in attendance, except when the Board decides otherwise.
- Review the structure, procedures and name of the Nominating Committee.
- Reform the procedures within the Board's Governance Committee (BGC) to increase transparency, accountability, and freedom from the risk of capture.
- Ensure that ICANN's default behavior is for all proceedings, minutes and staff documentation to be open, unless of an expressly confidential nature (i.e. about explicitly determined subjects such as personnel issues or contracts dealing with trade secrets).
- Ensure that progress reports by ICANN, including its compliance and enforcement activities, are reviewed by an independent body (self-evaluation by Staff is contrary to the principle of fair assessment).
- Study the extension of the duties of the Ombudsman to include the role of "independent objector" and consideration of "freedom of Information" requests regarding documents deemed confidential.

Institutional and Practical Cooperation

- In the Board's Global Relationships Committee (GRC), include non-Board members with experience in external forums of Internet governance as well as international and institutional affairs.
- Provide qualified and stable Staff and other resources to ensure a permanent, trustworthy and dynamic relationship with other entities in the Internet ecosphere (IGF, ITU, WIPO, ISOC, etc.). These relationships will not be engaged solely by ICANN staff, but augmented and highlighted by its stakeholders.
- Develop a network-based strategy for enhancing ICANN's global relations, coordination and cooperation with organizations working on the broad set of Internet Governance issues by leveraging on the strengths and diversity of connections/relationships that exist among members of the community.
