Hi,

I wish to withdraw part of my statement. I assumed I knew the short list who uttered those statements. I can't know and there is every chance that I am wrong. I am glad I did not name names, but I must say, the problem remains with the quotes and the fact that many have already had the same assumption about the speakers I had.

Apologies for the intemperance on that one point.

I do request that the incendiary quotes be removed from the report.

Hi,

Personally I find it unfortuante that your draft report put out calumnious quotes that have no basic in fact. I for one have been working very hard to help NPOC make its way in the NCSG and find the fact that this is what you picked to include so very unfortunate. Now instead of dealing with the substance of the report the NCUC is going to have to deal with arguing against the lies.

It also seems that you went against your rule of not including quotes where the speaker could be identified. While it may be hard to pin the specific speaker, the choice of one of two possible speakers is relatively easy. What you have done is take a sometimes difficult situation that has been improving over the years, entered it as patisans and made it so much worse. Now a competition of who can mud sling best is going to be much harder to contain.

It is sad that you have made the work of consensus building so much harder.
