Q14: Is Board obligations regarding GAC Advice (Stress Test 18) a solution that is acceptable to you?(Please refer to Annex 11 - Recommendation #11: Board obligations regarding GAC Advice)

Comment
It is most unfortunate that the CCWG has not been able to find a solution to the worst-case-scenario depicted in Stress Test 18 that has full support by all members of the GAC and of other constituencies. Sweden is of the opinion that this issue was not adequately addressed by the CCWG in earlier drafts of the report and that valuable time to find alternative solutions have been lost. Sweden recognizes that the view of the GAC may change as the NTIA relinquish its legacy control of the IANA-functions. The condition by NTIA that it "will not accept a proposal that replaces the NTIA role with a government-led or an inter-governmental organization solution" is reason for all to look at the GAC and assess whether it could possibly develop to become a threat to that condition. In such assessments some put emphasis on the fact that the GAC is an advisory body and does not participate in Board decision making, while others emphasise that advice by the GAC is given with the presumption to be followed and that the Board are obliged to engage to find a mutually acceptable solution. The conclusions as to whether or not the GAC could become a threat to the NTIA condition and therefore need to be tweaked will be different. On principle, Sweden agrees with those that argue that any changes to the decision making procedures should be at the discretion of the GAC, and we agree that the proposed solution to the Stress Test does not add any apparent value to the GAC, in fact it does not change anything except establishing the procedure we already use to reach agreement. However, since it does not really change anything there is no harm with the proposal either. On balance, we accept that it is of value to other constituencies to establish more firmly that the GAC shall continue to use consensus for the Board to engage in agreements with the GAC and that this should ensure that the NTIA condition is not at risk. We also believe the 2/3 vote for the Board to go against GAC advice is useful. For this reason Sweden can support the proposed solution to Stress Test 18 but we express our hope that it will be possible to reach an agreement for the final report that all GAC members and all constituencies will be able to embrace.
