

1. Have you registered any domain names which are parked? (Need to define parked.)
2. What proportion of the registrants in the new gTLDs registered primarily: (a) for defensive reasons, i.e., they felt compelled to register in a new gTLD because they existed but obtained no benefits from doing so and what proportion registered primarily (b) for the benefits that they received, perhaps because doing so permitted them to reach users that would have otherwise been inaccessible?
3. Switching to new gTLDs:
 - a. What proportion of the registrants in the new gTLDs were previously registrants in a legacy gTLD but gave up their registrations when they registered in a new gTLD?
 - b. What proportion of the registrants in the new gTLDs had not previously been registrants in any gTLD?
 - c. What proportion of the registrants in the new gTLDs are entities that continued to have registrations in legacy gTLDs
 - d. Has a registrant considered switching to a new gTLD over a legacy domain name?
 - i. If yes, why?
 - ii. If no:
 1. was there no perceived value of switching or was it because of the perceived switching costs?
 2. or did they turn out to be more expensive for them?
 - iii. What are the characteristics of the new gTLDs that attracted registrants primarily because of the benefits that they offered? This will provide some indication of the sources of the benefits that the new gTLDs provided, e.g., new allowable characters, service to a specific community, higher levels of security or customer service, ability to offer domain names to non-competing entities.
4. Questions removed from consumer survey to be added to registrant survey:
 - a. All questions that were aimed at consumers who are also registrants were dropped – make sure these are addressed in registrant questionnaire.
