 Eleeza Agopian: (15:40) Here are the suggested questionis David is reading:

 Eleeza Agopian: (15:40) Suggestion Q When you access a domain name extension (the part after the "dot") if the domain name extension in question is descriptive of a service or item would you expect that new gTLD to have domain names and websites in some way related to the domain name extension concerned? (For example if you go to .BANK would you expect to see registrations by Banks across the globe? If you go to .paris do you expect to see domain names connected to the city of Paris? If you go to .film do you expect to see content related to films?Suggestion Q Do you expect any domain name registrations under a certain domain name extension to have been subjected to eligibility requirements? Suggestion Q Where there are eligibility requirements for a specific domain name extension (the part after the "dot"), do you think proof that the registrant meets the eligibility requirements should be provided?

 Calvin Browne: (16:06) <I'm not really concerned>

 Calvin Browne: (16:06) <about the document>

 Calvin Browne: (16:07) (just got smaller - but I saw the 23rd)
