	So, more neutral question 1 (slide 1 of 5) is "Should the timing mechanism be changed?" Try to get to the heart of what the question is asking. In the context of the URS and the standard of proof not sure we should leave it to a developing body of jurisprudence or add a clarification as to whether or not allegations are entitled to any weight. Even if the standard of proof is clear and convincing is there any weight to an allegation that goes uncontested. The way it is treated now is inconsistent at best.	- Has it been used, if not why? Initial inquiry would seem to be how many, if any, default respondents have ever filed a reply and, if so, what the average time after default determination was. From the chat: Heather Forrest: Response fee - original purpose? being met? reason for change? George Kirikos: @Mary: I was asking more about after the default determination,, i.e. after the domain gets suspended, it could have a page saying why it was suspended, and the procedure the registrant can use (filing a URS response), etc. (in multiple languages)

The rationale for the clear and convincing standard of proof in a URS case rather than the preponderance of the evidence, burden of proof a UDRP, is that the URS should be a supplement to the UDRP for a clearly black and white case if not shaded gray cases. But the lock would remain perpetually despite the fact that the complainant would no longer have rights. The problem goes both ways. 	This question is about multiple abuse by the respondent for want of a better word. The two sides of the same coin. Because of course there are sanctions in relations to misuse of the URS by the trademark owner but there are no sanctions if you are a repeat offender, a multiple cyber squatter. If a registrant has a history of losing RPMs of being judged as cyber squatter multiple of times. Then the burden of proof, the meeting of the burden of proof has eased considerably in terms of bad faith use and registration. From ICANN60: Are we going to review/discuss the providers' supplemental rules for example to what extent may the supplemental rules effect the policy? Response: At some point in our review of the URS, we more likely than not will review those supplemental rules just to make sure that they're simply administrative in nature and have not in some way changed the balance set in the URS policy. 	Not sure it is our job to review URS providers. Not sure it is our place to be the compliance team. That is ICANN's job. It is our job to see if the URS is working. The original GNSO recommendation did call for providers to be under formal contract with ICANN. Would like to find out the rationale. Ascertain if they are in compliance with the MOU and that it is being administered consistent with the framework set forth by the community. Overarching question whether at the end of phase 1 whether the WG will recommend any of the RPMs to become consensus policy, such as the URS.

New Question

(15 November 2017):

There is a provision in the URS for abusive complaints that are filed and if there are over 3 filed there might be restrictions on the trademark owner to file further complaints. Should there be something similar for registrants who might be abusively registering domains. One compromise proposal was shifting the burden of proof to the respondent to meet the burden of proof.

New Question (from ICANN60):

Whether any superfluous overlap is created between:

- -- A respondent's right to de novo appeal within fourteen days from a determination (Section 12.1); versus
- -- A respondent's right to de novo review within six months from a notice of default (Section 6.4); versus
- -- A respondent's right to request a seven-day extension to respond during the response period, after default, or not more than thirty days from a determination. (Section 5.3)"

Has ICANN done a good job of training complainants concerning what the remedies are under the URS?

New Question (from ICANN60):

New Question (from ICANN60):

A more general question which is whether there should be some kind of alternative to the URS – such as a summary procedure in the UDRP?

Page 37: [6] Deleted Microsoft Office User 11/30/17 12:40:00 PM

New Question (from ICANN60):

Under URS the registry operator is required to suspend the domain name, however registry operators do not control the DNS and so it's really complicated, so how can a registry operator learn how this works?
