

Michelle DeSmyter:Dear All, Welcome to the Privacy and Proxy Services Accreditation IRT Registrar Subteam Meeting on Tuesday, 25 April 2017 at 14:00 UTC.

Chris Pelling:afternoon all :)

Chris Pelling:if someone would like to do a voice check I am happy to help

Chris Pelling:Hi AMy :)

Chris Pelling:yep :)

Chris Pelling:a little quiet

Darcy Southwell:Would be great if Nick could speak up - he's very hard to hear.

Chris Pelling:yepo

steve metalitz:@Nick, encouraging report!

Theo Geurts:let's hope there are not many rebels on starwars day

Theo Geurts:)

Lindsay Hamilton-Reid:Better than the Empire Theo :-)

steve metalitz:How would ICANN be able to notify customers since by definition it does not know who they are or their contact points (except in case of privacy provider)?

steve metalitz:would

Theo Geurts:RDE Deposit Stev?

Theo Geurts:err Steve rather

Amy Bivins 2:Good question, Steve--I believe Caitlin will talk about challenges with this in a moment

Amy Bivins 2:One of the issues with RDE deposits, Theo, is that ICANN can't access them before entity is terminated (at least for Rrs) steve metalitz:@Caitlin, in what proportion of involuntary termination cases does the registrar cooperate e.g. by providing a "gaining registrar designee"?

Volker A. Greimann:@IIRC, ICANN is not bound by any such designation steve metalitz:How would ICANN know whether the provider gave the 30 days' notice?

Theo Geurts:one of the practical issues we need to solve Volker A. Greimann:I see huge problems with the protection of private data in case of involuntary de-accreditation.

steve metalitz:How would option (1) work either if the provider being de-accredited is not affiliated with an accredited registrar, or if the provider to which the customer wants to switch is not affiliated?

Volker A. Greimann:Would a de-accreditation also require a domain transfer for affected customers?

steve metalitz:Following up on earlier chat dialogue with Theo, would RDE data supplied by provider be available to ensure notification to customers that their provider is about to be de-accredited?

steve metalitz:i.e. would that RDE data be available to ICANN?

Lisa Villeneuve:Would a de-accreditation also require a domain transfer for affected customers? Volker: can you explain if by transfer you intend a change of registrant or change of registrar?

Vicky Sheckler:forgive me for the ignorant question, but if the p/p is about to be de-accredited, doesn't either the p/p provider has to notify its customers so they can choose how to proceed, or if the p/p provider hasn't escrowed the data, the the customer may have a cause of action against the p/p provider?

Volker A. Greimann:The sponsoring registrar may not want domains using a certain p/p provider for example because they had some bad experiences in the past.

Volker A. Greimann:Any registrar transfer would have to be triggered by the registrant. there cannot be an automated process

Theo Geurts:for now option 1 sounds reasonable

Eric Rokobauer:can we get control to the slides? want to refer to option 1 steve metalitz:I would assume that those members of this IRT that give paramount importance to protecting privacy would prefer option 2 which provides a path for customers to a new p/p provider. But I don;t think any of them are on this call.....

steve metalitz:A poll might be appropriate here....

Darcy Southwell:Option #1 seems to combine P/P provider issues as well as registrar transfer issues

Darcy Southwell:+1 Theo - we need to look at draft language for a process and discuss Volker A. Greimann:a registrar transfer may not always be needed in option 1. sometimes switching resellers or going with a different provider supported at the same registrar may be an option too

Vicky Sheckler:my instinct leads to option 1 as a floor

Vicky Sheckler:the p/p customer should have choices as to how they want to proceed.

Vicky Sheckler:but also agree with theo et al that this requires more thinking

Darcy Southwell:+1 Roger - we have more than one scenario to consider here (e.g., affiliated p/p providers, unaffiliated) steve metalitz:Staff, assuming you get further guidance through a poll or otherwise, when could we expect to see a specific proposal with draft language?

Vicky Sheckler:thanks. bye

Roger Carney:Thanks everyone!!

Lisa Villeneuve:Thanks!
