Terri Agnew: NARALO Newsletter: <https://community.icann.org/x/54tYAw>

judith hellerstein: The NARALO Leadership address is a good thing

Louis Houle: Good point Alan

Alan Greenberg: What we have now IS a generic address. Just implemented differently than imagined.

Eve Edelson: I hear Judith judith hellerstein: Yes. I know the IETF allows this but we can not judith hellerstein: This is what Silvia told me

Silvia Vivanco: IT explanation: "IT, along with Cyber security, has further enhanced both the technical protections in place for ICANN domains as well as our internal procedures on what we allow since this was last discussed. These changes were made to establish sane SPF, DMARC and DKIM records. Cybersecurity does not endorse or condone the practice of sending emails from ICANN managed domains that originate outside of our infrastructure (see practice on subdomains for cloud provided services). Unfortunately, as this request is asking for assistance on sending emails from ICANN managed domains from outside our infrastructure, we have to deny this request".

Evan Leibovitch: thanks, alan. asked and answered judith hellerstein: @evan. Yes I checked this out thoroughly and that is how I came up with my creative solution to solve this problem

Javier RÚA-JOVET: Must excuse myself; see you all in Hyderabad. Bye!

judith hellerstein: Bye

Evan Leibovitch: of course... I wonder why it is better to use naralo.org than naralo.icann.org, the use of which would make the forwarding a non-issue

Eduardo Díaz: We can open up and email in a domain that we can get and then use that email as a generic email to forward to whoever is the NARALO Chair/Secretary at the specific moment
